QUESTION 1

What happens when you attempt to drag an audio clip (including audio linked to video) to an audio track of a different channel type?

- A. Premiere Pro automatically generates or removes audio channels in the clip to match the audio track's channel type.
- B. A dialog box appears, prompting you to resolve the problem by choosing another target track, or creating a compatible target track.
- C. The clip is added to the track; however, Premiere Pro ignores or distributes audio channels in the clip according to the audio track's channel type.
- D. The audio clip (or audio component of a linked clip) automatically shifts to the next compatible audio track; if no such track exists, then an audio track of the appropriate channel type is created automatically.
